THE CLINICAL PROGRAM

PIONEERING. INCLUSIVE. REQUIRED.

At the University of New Mexico School of Law, collaborative clinical teaching methods link the classroom and the community to the practice of law. In our Clinical Program, students gain real-world experience while our clinical faculty continue to expand and enhance the program that helped to pioneer clinical legal education.

“We train law students how to practice law. Guided by an energetic group of tenured and tenure-track faculty, our students represent real people. They gain a first-hand, critical understanding of the responsibility of lawyering and the privilege of serving.”

—Professor April Land,
Associate Dean for Clinical Affairs

42 Years of a required, collaborative Clinical Program

100 Percent of students required to participate in the clinical experience

7:1 Student-to-faculty ratio in the Clinical Program

8 Core clinical faculty

4 Traditional course faculty rotate into the Clinical Program each year

THE CLINICAL PROGRAM

Pioneering

The University of New Mexico was one of the first law schools in the country to create a mandatory clinic where students earn law school credit for representing real clients with supervision by tenured and tenure-track faculty. UNM also pioneered the use of technology in the clinical program with the development and use of an automated case management system. Constantly expanding and evolving, our clinical program continues to be recognized as a national leader.

What Sets Us Apart:

The “Largest Law Firm in New Mexico”
—given our total number of individuals providing legal services

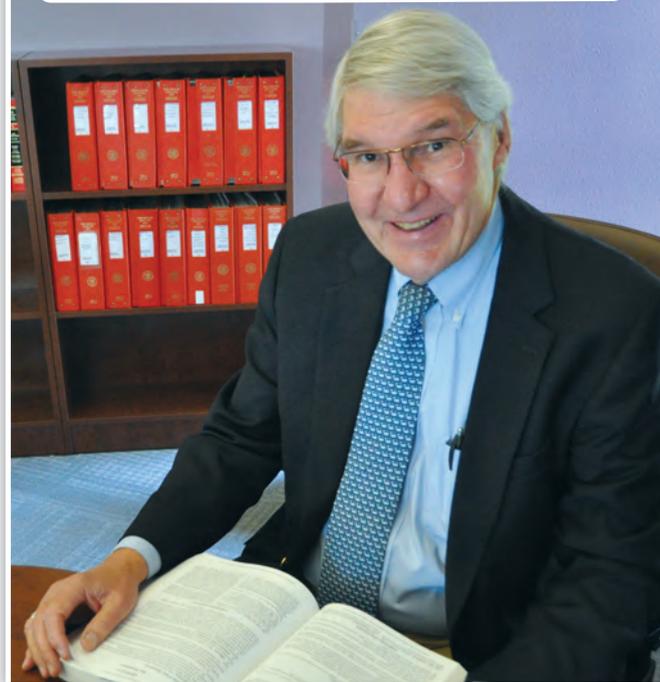

Our Record of National Distinction
—consistently a US News & World Report top program

Steadfast Internal Program Support
—from our full Faculty and Deans

Vigorous External Collaborations
—with our Courts and the Bar

“The pioneering vision for a dynamic, evolving clinic continues and is now reflected in our collaborative, multidisciplinary approach and state-of-the-art clinical classrooms.”

—Professor J. Michael Norwood,
Emeritus Professor of Law, Director of Clinical Programs 1983–1992

“As Associate Dean for Clinical Affairs, my goal was to make UNM Law’s Clinical Program the premier poverty law firm in the state. During that time, the Southwest Indian Law Clinic, the Business and Tax Clinic, the Law Practice Clinic, and the Medical/Legal Alliance became integral sections of the firm.”

—Antoinette Sedillo Lopez,
*Dickason Professor of Law,
former Associate Dean for Clinical Affairs*

THE CLINICAL PROGRAM

Inclusive

Our clinic focuses on inclusion. All students have the opportunity for a clinical experience with core clinical faculty and the traditional course faculty who rotate into the clinic. We collaborate with the Courts, the Bar, New Mexico communities, and legal educators nationwide.

This fall, the School of Law is hosting an invitation-only two day conference supported by the Clinical Legal Education Association (CLEA) on implementing best practices for legal education.

—Christine Zuni Cruz,
Dickason Professor of Law, Associate Dean for the Indian Law Program and a founder of the Southwest Indian Law Clinic

“From its inception, the Southwest Indian Law Clinic has utilized a community lawyering approach in its work. This approach helps students prepare for the practice of Indian Law where the individual and the community are integrally intertwined.”

THE CLINICAL PROGRAM

Required

We shape more lawyers through service than any other institution in the state.

Our law students are on the front lines of public service, representing real clients while receiving six credits for the mandatory clinic program. Our students have appeared in Metropolitan Court, District Courts, Tribal Courts, the New Mexico Court of Appeals, and the New Mexico Supreme Court as part of their clinical training.

We shape competent, confident lawyers.

Working in multidisciplinary teams in the clinics, our students enhance their analytical skills and develop problem-solving and counseling skills. Students enjoy individualized and expert training from seasoned faculty and acquire a tested first-hand familiarity with the legal system in advance of their graduation.

Professor Nathalie Martin, Business and Tax (Economic Development) Clinic, Frederick M. Hart Chair in Consumer and Clinical Law

Mark Holm

“Through the Medical Legal Alliance, our law students are able to integrate into healthcare settings right in the communities where many of our clients live. Students collaborate with professionals from other disciplines aimed at effective problem-solving on behalf of children and adults living in poverty and clients receive better access to legal services.”

—Yael Cannon,
Assistant Professor of Law

Mark Holm

“The collaboration with our medical team gives our students a richness of experience and insight into the complex lives of our clients.”

THE CLINICAL PROGRAM

Medical-Legal Alliance

The Community Lawyering Clinic provides outreach legal services in partnership with local community service providers, including non-legal disciplines. Through the Medical-Legal Alliance (MLA), the clinic has entered into a strategic alliance, one of the nation’s first, with the Pediatrics and Family Medicine Departments of the UNM Health Sciences Center.

MLAC law students conduct intakes onsite at UNM health clinics in a low-income neighborhood of Albuquerque. Students train healthcare providers to identify and better address legal issues that affect their patients and provide direct legal representation in and out of court to children, caregivers, and families to address issues such as housing, education, domestic violence, and immigration status.

Students represent clients in Family Court, Children’s Court (juvenile delinquency), and other venues as necessary.

Clinical Sections

Southwest Indian Law

Students represent individual clients and/or tribal groups or Indian communities and learn how to approach legal solutions premised on tribal sovereignty, cultural rights, and more.

Business and Tax

Students provide legal services to businesses and individuals in areas such as estate planning, dispute resolution, taxation, financial crises, and working with the IRS.

Law Practice

In an experiential learning rotation typical of a general law practice, students represent clients in a variety of both civil and criminal cases.

Community Lawyering

Students work closely with physicians, social workers, community planners, community activists, and nonprofits at various sites across Albuquerque.

“The clinic, its staff, and supervising attorneys take their time to carefully explain legal issues, as well as the ins and outs of the court systems. I believe this method of 'learning-through-practice' makes better, more capable attorneys.”
